Air Liquide Australia Certified to OHSAS 18001:2007

Air Liquide Australia (ALA) was recently awarded the OHSAS 18001:2007 and AS/NZS 4801:2001 accreditations. OHSAS 18001:2007 is the highly regarded international ISO standard for occupational health and safety whilst the AS/NZS 4801:2001 is the Australian and New Zealand equivalent.

These standards provide the company with a more robust and externally audited framework to manage its operational risks and to minimise risks to their employees' occupational health and safety.

Bureau Veritas, a global provider of conformity assessment and certification services performed this accreditation audit.

The audit team found many strong elements in ALA's safety culture and systems such as the Annual Safety Scorecard, a leading safety indicator that drives the compliance and improvement effort within the Air Liquide Group's Industrial Management System (IMS).
